Born in 1962, Nemirovski studied in Paris with Elena Varvarova and France Clidat before being admitted to the Juilliard School in 1981, where he studied with Nadia Reisenberg and Adele Marcus, heirs to the traditions of Josef Hofmann, Josef Lhévinne and Artur Schnabel; he later worked with Alexis Weissenberg. From 1989 to 1994 he was Assistant Adviser for the masterclasses to Vladimir Spivakov at the Colmar International Festival. Until 1995 he appeared in concert throughout Europe, Asia and the United States and broadcast for France Musique and France Culture, before withdrawing from the concert platform to devote himself to teaching. His studio recording Entre Ciel et Terre (2004), devoted to Chopin, Prokofiev and Scriabin, was praised in Le Figaro by Jacques Doucelin.

He taught at the Royal Academy of Music in London from 2006 to 2016, where he led the Piano Pedagogy specialism of the LRAM and was made an Honorary Associate (Hon ARAM) in 2009, and at the Purcell School from 2011 to 2017. He was appointed Visiting Professor at the Royal Birmingham Conservatoire in 2015 and has held its International Chair in Piano since 2016.

With Béatrice Quoniam he founded the Concours International de Piano de Lagny-sur-Marne and the Concours International de Piano Antoine de Saint-Exupéry, and co-wrote the two-volume method Les Leçons de piano (Éditions Henry Lemoine). He was Artistic Director and Chair of the Madrid International Piano Competition, and in 2023 founded IPM – International Piano Masters, with its international academy in Vienna.
