

(UN)BROKEN SYSTEM

Reviving and Renewing Education for a Wise Economy

An international series of forums, conferences and campus dialogues

An invitation to experts, keynote speakers and host institutions

How can education renew its purpose, develop human potential and strengthen its contribution to society through rapid change? (UN)BROKEN SYSTEM brings together researchers, educational leaders and partners to develop practical guidance for educational renewal, with higher education at the heart of the discussion.

Join as a speaker | Propose a host campus | Express interest in attending

About the series

Reviving education means reconnecting teaching and research with human and societal needs. Renewing education means rethinking how institutions teach, organise, finance and govern their work. The series examines these questions through scholarship, institutional experience and dialogue with business, public authorities and learners.

(UN)BROKEN SYSTEM expresses a commitment to education's continuity through change. We will examine how education can survive disruption while preserving independent inquiry, developing human capabilities and opening space for initiative. Each edition will connect these questions to its host's priorities and produce proposals that participants can develop further.

What we mean by a wise economy

A wise economy uses resources effectively and transparently, develops people's capabilities and considers the long-term consequences of its decisions. Within the series, we will explore how education and science can help create such an economy, and how businesses can share responsibility through investment, research and collaborative learning. This includes examining avoidable public expenditure alongside quality, access and the full costs borne by learners and society.

Topics for discussion

- Reviving educational purpose. Human potential, judgment, creativity, meaningful work and education's contribution to society.
- Renewing institutions and governance. Autonomy, transparent administration, accountability and the capacity to change.
- Learning through technological change. Educational practices that develop independent thinking and help people navigate disruption.
- Financing education wisely. Efficient public spending, shared resources and sustainable investment that preserves educational access.
- Private initiative and public value. Diverse educational models, quality, opportunity and fair conditions for innovation.
- Education science and business. Reciprocal investment, joint research and collaboration to develop a wise economy.

Contribute to the series

Join as an expert or keynote speaker

We invite scholars and practitioners in education theory and practice, economics and finance, public administration, organisational studies and related fields. We welcome research, institutional experience and constructive disagreement. Contributions should help participants understand what needs renewal, what deserves preservation and which changes can be put into practice.

Join as a keynote speaker, panel contributor, moderator, workshop facilitator or research collaborator. You can examine teaching and learning, an institutional reform, a partnership or the wider education system. We are particularly interested in contributions connecting human development with responsible governance, financing or cooperation.

To propose a contribution, send:

- Your name, affiliation and a short biography.
- A proposed title and a 150–250-word outline of your argument, evidence and relevance.
- Your preferred role, location and availability.
- Any practical requirements for your participation.

Email subject: (UN)BROKEN SYSTEM | Speaker proposal

Send your proposal to connect@synergetica.lt. The organising team will discuss the contribution and suitable edition with you.

Host an event on your campus or premises

We invite universities, colleges, research centres, education networks and other relevant organisations to host an edition on their campus or premises. Bring your academics and students into the programme, convene regional partners, and connect educational renewal to the questions that matter to your institution and community.

Synergetica Educational Group will develop the theme, programme and format with each host. The organising team can coordinate the shared concept, international invitations and series communication. Hosts can contribute academic leadership, a venue, local outreach and event support. Responsibilities, costs and co-organiser credits will be agreed for each edition.

To propose a host location, send your institution and city, a local coordinator, possible dates, venue capacity and facilities, the theme you would like to develop, and the support your institution could provide.

Send your proposal to connect@synergetica.lt. We will arrange a discussion to explore the programme and hosting requirements.

Events and practical information

Locations and upcoming editions

We are developing the series with prospective partners across Europe, India and Dubai. Dates, venues and participation details will be announced as individual editions are confirmed. Institutions are welcome to propose additional locations within these regions.

Event formats

- Forum: keynotes, moderated dialogue and working sessions on educational purpose, institutional renewal and societal contribution.
- Scientific conference: research presentations and scholarly discussion, with contribution and review arrangements specified for that edition.
- Workshop or leadership roundtable: a focused session developing an educational practice, governance response, financing proposal or partnership.

Each edition will have its own programme. In-person and hybrid participation can be considered with the host.

What the series aims to produce

We aim to turn the series into shared guidance for educational renewal. Depending on the edition, participants may develop a discussion paper, an institutional diagnostic, a teaching approach, a research collaboration or a proposal for joint investment. Contributions can inform a renewal guide addressing educational purpose, human potential, governance, financing and cooperation. Follow-up priorities will be agreed with the participants and host.

Who should participate

Academics and doctoral researchers; university and college leaders; educators and students; economists and public-administration specialists; business and philanthropic partners; and organisations working on education and societal development.

Participation arrangements

Programme selection, registration, fees, language and participation mode will be published for each confirmed event. Speaker travel and any honorarium will be agreed individually before participation. Publication opportunities, where offered, will have their own editorial requirements.

Organisation and local partnerships

Main organiser: Synergetica Educational Group.

Host institutions and co-organisers will be named for each event.

Get involved

Propose a contribution, offer a host campus or express interest in attending. Contact connect@synergetica.it and tell us how you would like to participate.

Join as a speaker | Propose a host campus | Express interest in attending